STARTING A BUSINESS IN SWEDEN

AN INTRODUCTION

Setting up a business in Sweden is a straightforward process. Procedures are simple and efficient, based on a transparent system seeking to facilitate the establishment of new enterprises.

Swedish society and industry is highly international and technology oriented. Sweden has no regulations discriminating foreign investors and shareholders may reside in any country.

LIMITED LIABILITY COMPANY OR BRANCH?

Foreign-based companies wishing to establish an enterprise in Sweden typically choose one of two main business structures:

- Subsidiary – a limited liability company (aktiebolag)
- Branch (filial)

Most foreign investors who set up a business in Sweden opt for a private limited liability company. Swedish legislation has long accepted limited liability companies with a sole owner (wholly owned subsidiaries).

A private limited liability company is a legal entity incorporated in Sweden. The minimum share capital is SEK 25,000.

A branch is not incorporated in Sweden but is a divisional office part of a foreign limited company – organised to conduct business in Sweden.

Both a private limited liability company and a branch must be registered at the Swedish Companies Registration Office (Bolagsverket) and the Swedish Tax Agency (Skatteverket).

A limited liability company must appoint a board of directors and, if it is public, a managing director. A branch must have a managing director. Specific rules regarding residency of the managing director and the board of directors apply. In general, at least half of the board members must reside within the European Economic Area (EEA), unless an exemption is granted.

Limited liability companies and branches are required to comply with Swedish bookkeeping regulations and depending on certain criteria appoint an auditor. A limited liability company must submit annual reports (including accounts) to Bolagsverket. A branch has to keep its accounts separate from those of the foreign-based company. Whether the annual accounts of both the foreign-based company and the branch are to be submitted depends on a number of factors.

For tax purposes, a limited liability company and a branch are treated in similar fashion, but they may give rise to different tax implications depending on the group structure. Sweden applies a flat corporate income tax rate of 20.6 per cent and allows group contribution rules for qualifying group companies. For limited liability companies, group contribution rules admit transfer of profits between two group companies, meaning that taxation of a consolidated income is effectively achievable. A branch structure can offer tax benefits for a transitional period when launching a business. This is because deficits may be tax deductible for the foreign-based company as the branch is not a legal entity in its own right. This advantage is not open to a subsidiary, which is considered a Swedish legal entity regardless of ownership.

The term “representative office” is sometimes mentioned as an alternative business format.

IN BRIEF

- Straightforward system for business startups
- Limited liability company most used form
- No Swedish partner needed to start a business

However, a “representative office” is not recognised as a legal entity under Swedish law.

SOME BUSINESSES REQUIRE LICENSES

It is important to establish whether a license is needed to carry out the business of the company, although it should be noted that it is quite unusual for a business to require a license in Sweden.

Laws generally regulate license requirements. The Police authority, the Municipality and the County Administrative Board (Länsstyrelsen) are often involved in licensing activities. Foreign banks and other financial institutions with subsidiaries and branches in Sweden must be authorised/ registered with the Swedish Financial Supervisory Authority (Finansinspektionen).
